I have just received a leaflet about the future potential redevelopment of the Greyhound site and would like some more information please.

I have checked the website and found that there is potentially going to be a football stadium and 450-500 flats with retail on the site. Would this mean losing the greyhounds and stock cars?

Whenever I go to either of the events it is always popular and I have had friends come from all over London to go to both events as there is nowhere else in South London that has the greyhounds or stock car racing and it would be a great shame to lose these.

Personally I welcome the idea of having an improved greyhound and stock car stadium with better retail, potentially like Merton Abbey Mills but not overdeveloped like too many sites now. As a resident I don't think the extra traffic and footfall from the potential flats and football stadium is welcome though as the area already at a standstill at rush hour and weekends, the public transport and road system is not good enough to cope plus I don't like the idea of more flats in the area. I think there are already too many blocks of flats, personally I would much prefer more affordable 1-2 bedroom houses with gardens.
