I'm conscious that today is the deadline for comments on the proposals in the development plan, and I wanted to briefly offer a view on the redevelopment of the Patrick Doody clinic.

We live in Griffiths Road, and back on to the clinic. I do not take a particular view on the type of use of the site. My main concern in any redevelopment is that any new structure should not exceed the height of the current building, and that the rear of the building should not intrude further back on the site.

An important argument for us in buying our house was that we were not overlooked to the rear, and it strikes me as right that any new building should - in a low-level residential area - maintain the current profile of the building.
