South London Waste Plan

Consultation on moving away from landfill
19th September to 31st October

Landfill space is running out and buried waste releases climate-changing gases. New facilities to deal with waste more sustainably are needed. Tell us what issues are important in deciding where these should go.

European and UK legislation requires increasing amounts of waste to be recycled, composted and processed and less waste to be buried in landfill. To support this, new facilities are needed.

Councils must now start to think about how to identify sites where future facilities to deal with waste from businesses, industry and households could be located within their boundaries. Croydon, Kingston, Merton and Sutton are working together to meet this challenge by developing The South London Waste Plan.

The South London Waste Plan is at a very early stage. No sites are proposed yet because we need your views on a range of issues including:

- What issues are important in deciding which sites will be suitable for waste management facilities?
- Should the new facilities be focused on existing waste and industrial sites? Or somewhere else?

[Borough name] Council seeks public opinion on managing borough’s waste

At their latest [meeting name e.g executive] meeting, [borough name] Council agreed to seek views from residents, businesses and others on where [borough name] will manage the borough’s waste in the future.

In partnership with neighbouring councils Croydon, Kingston, Merton and Sutton [delete as appropriate], [borough name] Council is preparing a joint Waste Development Plan Document, known as the South London Waste Plan. Following feedback from residents and businesses, this planning document will identify potentially suitable locations for local waste management facilities. It will also set out a range of policies on how to manage waste produced in the four boroughs in the most environmentally-friendly way possible.

From the 19 September to 31 October the council will call for feedback from residents, businesses and others on a range of issues. Although there will be other opportunities to get involved over the next two and a half years, [borough name] Council is keen for the public to get involved at this early stage to help shape the development of the South London Waste Plan.

The South London Waste Plan is being developed in response to demands from regional and central Government and the European Parliament for all local authorities to plan for the development of local waste management facilities and reduce reliance on landfill, or face being fined. All areas of the UK are now expected to deal with more of their own waste in facilities situated in their own regions. In London, the Mayor wants the capital to become 85% self-sufficient in managing its own waste by 2020. This will help reduce emissions of climate changing greenhouse gases associated with landfill and the transportation waste by road, outside London.

The European Parliament and central and regional Government are also calling for all of us to reduce the amount of waste produced in the first place, to maximise recycling and composting and to increase the amount of energy produced from any waste left over.

Executive/Cabinet Member for [insert portfolio], Councillor [insert name] said, “We want to hear the views and any concerns residents, businesses and others may have about where we manage the rubbish we all produce. [Borough name] households produce over [insert tonnage] tonnes of waste each year - almost [insert tonnage] per year for each household. Local businesses, construction sites and hospitals produce even more. Altogether, that’s a lot of rubbish to deal with and the usual disposal route, landfill, is no longer sustainable. Waste burnt in landfill releases potent greenhouse gases and councils will soon face fines if they do not meet landfill reduction targets set by central Government. Most waste generated within the Greater London area is transported outside London, using costly fuel and generating even more greenhouse gases. Developing local waste management facilities will be one important way for the borough to reduce its carbon footprint. The South London Waste Plan has a critical role to play in finding suitable sites for these."

Notes to editors

To be invited to their nearest workshop, residents can email southlondonwasteplan@rbk.kingston.gov.uk or call the project manager on 020 8547 5375. Residents can also visit www.merton.gov.uk/wasteplan <http://www.merton.gov.uk/wasteplan> [amend for each borough]

The five stages to the process of developing the Joint Waste DPD are currently:

Consultation on Issues and Options - September - October 2008-09
-Consultation on Preferred Options - September - October 2009
-Submission of Preferred Options - June 2010
-Independent Examination - December 2010
-Adoption - September 2011

This process may change in response to changing Government guidelines on the preparation of boroughs’ Local Development Frameworks.

Once implemented, the South London Waste Plan will be monitored annually and reviewed every five years to ensure the Plan evolves to meet changing local circumstances. There are currently 14 facilities within the four boroughs which manage waste (not including landfill). These facilities can currently manage 745,000 tonnes per year. It is forecast that by 2021 the four boroughs will generate 1.4 million tonnes per year. This means that an estimated 14 additional facilities will be needed across the area requiring approximately 15-17 hectares of land.

Local planning authorities are required under the provisions of the Planning and Compulsory Purchase Act 2004 to replace Unitary Development Plans with a Local Development Framework (LDF). The LDF will contain a number of documents that together set out the council’s planning policy and strategic vision for the area. The Joint Waste DPD will form part of Merton’s LDF.
Dear Consultee,

Please find enclosed a flyer informing you of the forthcoming consultation on the development of the South London Waste Plan which is being prepared jointly by the boroughs of Croydon, Kingston, Merton and Sutton:

The flyer contains dates for public workshops as well as further details about how you can get involved and have your say.

The consultation documents will be available online from Friday 19th September, via your council’s webpage:

The South London Waste Plan
High-profile waste

The council is joining forces with three neighbouring boroughs to deal with the ever-growing problem of rubbish disposal — and your views are wanted

With central and regional government demanding London boroughs provide their own waste disposal facilities, Croydon Council will be inviting residents to put forward their views and share their concerns about where we should manage the rubbish produced in the borough.

Croydon households produce 139,427 tonnes of waste each year (source: Defra 2016/2017) — the same as filling up 633 double-decker buses. More than 80% ends up in landfill.

Add to that waste produced by local businesses, construction sites, hospitals and the like, and that's a lot of rubbish to deal with.

Landfill is the most filling up, and the waste stored in landfill releases the greenhouse gas methane. Transporting the waste also creates CO2 emissions.

Having local facilities could reduce climate-changing gas emissions and reduce our reliance on landfill.

Much of our waste can be reused, recycled or composted in state-of-the-art facilities, and the waste that remains after recycling and composting can be used to produce heat or energy.

Have your say now, before it becomes policy.

Croydon has teamed up with the neighbouring authorities in Kingston, Sutton and Merton to develop a waste plan.

The plan will identify local sites suitable for waste management and set out policies for sustainably managing waste. When complete, it will become part of each borough's local development framework.

We want to involve as many residents as possible in the decision-making process, so get in touch now.

The first public consultation on developing a waste plan runs from 19 September to 31 October, with public workshops held during that period.

For an invite to your nearest workshop, email southernarrowswasteplan@kms.dg.kingston.gov.uk or call Emma Smyth on 020 8547 5375.

Down to the Hub

A second small, new general hall and an all-weather pitch have been given the green light by Merton Council. The green light was given for a new second hall in the Hub at Thornton Heath Football Club. The decision is based on the club’s demand for a second hall, which is likely to encourage local young people to play football more than ever before. The project will be completed in partnership with the Hub and will bring benefits to the community by increasing the quality of training and facilities available to local youth teams.

Music is for life

Over 600 children from Merton, Haslemere, and Caterham primary schools have taken part in the Merton Music Festival this month. The festival is a celebration of music in Merton and is funded by the Merton Music Foundation. The festival includes a range of events, including concerts, workshops, and masterclasses, and is open to all ages and abilities.

IN FOCUS: Elizabeth House

Predictably the very best homes for the borough's older residents is a top priority for Sutton Council.

We want to provide more modern accommodation that enables residents to lead full and independent lives.

That is why the council has decided to replace the existing Home at St. Elizabeth's in Cheam with new accommodation fit for the 21st century.

There are currently 35 beds in the main building, 17 direct bipartition and 28 one-bedroom flats in St. Edmund's Gardens, Pond Hill Gardens and Wood Road. These have high levels of fitness to meet the needs of the elderly.

The decision includes replacing the existing accommodation with a mix of new residential homes, including flats

The plans include:

- Replacing the existing accommodation with a mix of new residential homes, including flats

Celebrating Care

A new care package, 'Heads and Shoulders' is just the beginning of the improvements being made in Sutton's care homes.

The council has allocated £250,000 to improve the environment of care homes in the area.
